The Department of Philosophy is seeking funding support from the Cultural Affairs/Distinguished Lecture Series Fund for its 2009-2010 Philosophy Colloquium Series. This series of public talks will provide the opportunity for students, faculty, and community members both within and beyond the Department of Philosophy to hear and discuss stimulating lectures on a wide range of topics that are relevant both to the core themes of the department's philosophy curriculum as well as to current issues of ethical, political, social, and philosophic import. Some of the events enable collaboration and communication with other units on the campus and in the community.

1. "Darwin's 'Strange Inversion of Reasoning'"

October 15, 2009

Daniel C. Dennett,

Austin B. Fletcher Professor of Philosophy and Co-Director of the Center for Cognitive Studies, Tufts University

Professor Dennett, one of America's leading philosophers, is the author of Darwin's Dangerous Idea and many other books on evolution and the philosophy of mind. His talk, sponsored by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, will be a contribution to the Celebration of Darwin.

2. "A Conversation on Activism and Philosophy"

November 5, 2009

David Swanson, M.A., Philosophy

Author of Daybreak: Undoing the Imperial Presidency and Forming a More Perfect Union

David Swanson is co-founder of After Downing Street, seeking to enhance accountability of the executive branch of government. His visit is co-sponsored by the Maine Peace Action Committee, the Socialist and Marxist Studies Interdisciplinary Minor, and the Peace and Justice Center of Eastern Maine, with support from the Schonberger Lecture Fund. He has turned his graduate training in philosophy into a career as a public intellectual and activist.

3. "He Saw the Cities and He Knew the Minds of Many Men': Landscape and Character in Plato's Laws and Homer's Odyssey"

November 12, 2009

Patricia Fagan

Professor of Languages, Literatures, and Cultures, University of Windsor

Professor Fagan specializes in classical languages, literature, and philosophy. Her talk will enrich the academic experience of students studying Ancient Philosophy, as well as those in Philosophy and Literature, and the talk should appeal to faculty and students in other departments focused on the study of literature and history.

4. "Spinoza: Religious or Philosophical Heretic"

November 19, 2009

6. "Creativity and Creation in Early Daoism" February 11, 2009
James Behuniak
Assistant Professor of Philosophy, Colby College

Professor Behuniak specializes in East Asian philosophy, American philosophy, and philosophy of religion. As there is no one at the University of Maine with a specialization in Chinese philosophy, his talk will add to the diversity of our series, and should be of interest to students and faculty in many other fields.

7. "What is Fair Trade?" April 2009
Philosophy Visiting Scholar Aaron James
Professor of Philosophy, University of California, Irvine

Professor James specializes in global justice, with a focus on fair trade. During his visit he will present two public talks. These should be of interest not only to philosophers but also faculty and students in economics, history, and other fields.

Changes to the program and budget

The original plan was to have 7 speakers, not 5. One co-sponsor, Phi Sigma Tau, the Philosophy Honor Society did not bring a speaker this year. The seventh speaker was to have been the Philosophy Visiting Scholar, but the department funds available for this were frozen, due to College budget constraints. As is evident in the attached budget summary, we were unable to match $1800, and consequently did not use the full grant from CA/DLS. Funds from the Philosophy Department, together with funding from cosponsors ($794.27) were a little more than the $605.16 used from the CA/DLS grant.

Note that we list no funding or costs for the talk by Daniel Dennett, as this was funded through the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, with a separate grant from CA/DLS.
