Cultural Affairs/Distinguished Lecture Series
Grant Application (2010-2011)

Department of History

The Department of History is seeking the Committee's support for its 2010-2011 Colloquium Series. Its annual series of talks is designed to support both the curricular and scholarly interests of undergraduates, graduates and faculty in History and to reach out to interested faculty and students in other disciplines at the University of Maine.

We are requesting support at this time to bring three speakers to campus during the academic year. It is anticipated that support for this series will allow us to bring a fourth speaker. On September 16, John A. Davis, Emiliana Pasca Noether Chair in Modern Italian History, University of Connecticut, will present a paper entitled, "The Jews of San Nicandro." The paper stems from his latest research which will be published by Yale University Press later this year. Prof. Davis, the author of several books, is a world-renowned expert on Modern Italian history and his talk will support the University of Maine's commitment to diversity. On October 18, David Armitage, Professor of History, Harvard University, will present his paper entitled, "'The Age of Revolutions and Constitutions': The American Founding in Global Perspective." Prof. Armitage, the author of several books, is one of a few young historians who has reshaped how we approach Atlantic history in the 20th Century. His paper will be of great interest to both historians and political scientists; and to the general public as well. On April 4, David Gordon, Associate Professor of History, Bowdoin College, will present his paper entitled, "Spirits and Politics: Alternative Sovereignties in Central African History." Like Prof. Davis' talk, this will support the University's commitment to diversity. We expect the paper to be of interest to historians and anthropology undergraduates and graduate students.

The Department of History is asking the CA/DLS Committee to fund half the cost of our expenses (see attached Budget).

“An Uncomfortable Family Resemblance: Murderer, Traitor, and Political Hero in the First Asylum Law”

by
Professor Caroline Shaw

Caroline Shaw is assistant professor of modern European history at Bates College, where she teaches broadly on the history of Europe and Europe in the world between the 18th and 20th centuries. She moved to Bates this past fall from California, where she received a PhD in British and Modern European histories at UC Berkeley. Her talk is drawn from her dissertation and book project. The broader project is a history of the British origins of modern refugee. It traces the development of the refugee as a political and humanitarian concept in the century before the term would be defined in domestic or in international law.

HISTORY DEPARTMENT SYMPOSIUM

With support from the Cultural Affairs Distinguished Lecture Series

"HISTORY AND THE INVISIBLE WORLD"

In diverse periods and places, people have believed in and engaged with invisible spiritual forces. David Gordon discusses how historians can investigate and write about the influence of a world that is invisible and implausible to them, and yet holds historical importance. The argument is illustrated by case studies from his forthcoming book, Invisible Agents: Spirits and History in Central Africa. David Gordon is Associate Professor of History at Bowdoin College.
