No. 1. The spring term was taught by Miss Inez M. Rowe, who taught so successfully in this school the previous year. The fall and winter terms were under the instruction of Miss Charlotte M. Parsons, a graduate of Gorham Normal School, and notwithstanding this being her first school, the successful results would have given credit to one of more experience. She is a modern and progressive teacher, and we were very fortunate in securing her services.

No. 2. Miss Elsie M. Dolloff taught the spring term, but was obliged to resign at the close on account of ill health. Miss Dolloff was one of our best teachers. The fall and winter terms were taught by Miss Della M. Haskell. This was Miss Haskell’s first school, and with more experience she will undoubtedly make a first class teacher. The only possible criticism that could be made of her methods, was a perceptible lack of discipline.

Longfellow School. Miss Ethel F. Kimball was retained in this school, with the same continued success.

No. 6. Miss Bertie M. Rankin taught in this school during the whole year. The unanimous request by parents and pupils for her return, is sufficient proof of her popularity and success.

Washington School. The spring term was taught by Miss Elizabeth B. Mountfort, who was obliged to leave at the close of the term on account of sickness in her family. Miss Mountfort is one of our most experienced and successful teachers. The fall and winter terms were taught by Miss Susie B. Kimball. Miss Kimball was very enthusiastic in her work, and marked progress was made under her instruction.

REMARKS.

This has been one of the most prosperous years in our school history. There has been very little interruption in the work and most gratifying results have been accomplished.
We doubt if at any time our schools have had more experienced and skilful teachers, taken as a whole, than during the past year; teachers who have shared in the social and intellectual life of the community.

At the close of the spring term a proposition was made to the teachers that all those who would attend any summer school for teachers, would receive an advance of twenty-five cents per week. Three of the teachers availed themselves of this opportunity, and the training they received added greatly to their efficiency.

As far as the available funds would allow, there has been introduced from time to time supplementary work, which gives the pupils the advantages of modern methods and advanced ideas.

Nature studies have been continued, and the pupils have manifested much interest in gathering specimens in nature for logical study. For this work "Plants and Their Children" was introduced. The book is arranged so as to begin with the opening of the school year and to follow it to its close. As every specimen of plant life gives support to at least ten insects, a companion book was obtained, called "Short Stories of Our Shy Neighbors," which treats, zoologically, of the most familiar objects met with in every day life. These books have certainly awakened in the pupils an enthusiasm and desire for further investigation.

One of the chief aims of modern teaching is to make a study interesting, and to present it in a manner that will excite and impress the susceptible imagination of the pupil. In no study is this more essential than in the study of history, and as a preliminary and supplementary work in this course there have been used in the schools "Stories of Great Americans for Little Americans" and "Fifty Famous Stories Retold." Some of these stories are those that every American child ought to know, as they have become a kind of folklore.
For the course in Civil Government, "Stetson's History and Government of Maine" was introduced, a book most admirably adapted to the schools of Maine; also "Stories of Maine," which is very interesting and instructive.

In some of the schools a course in singing was given, and a surprising advancement was made. Lessons in drawing also have been given, in which marked improvement was shown.

The movement started by the teacher and pupils in different schools in beautifying the schoolrooms has been continued during the year with noticeable results, especially in school No. 6, which has been a source of pride to teacher and pupils. In No. 4 the school has been named the "Longfellow School," and the room significantly decorated; so in No. 9, which is named the "Washington School." Such movements ought to be encouraged, as they have an elevating influence on the pupils.

One of the most pleasing exercises of the pupils has been the committing and repeating of short passages of prose and verse from our best authors. Although this exercise is of late introduction in our schools, it has long been in practice in the schools of England and on the continent of Europe. It was especially advocated by early writers on education, and it is now recognized by our best teachers as an important element of school training. It strengthens the memory, a wider and better knowledge of language, develops a taste for a pure and ennobling literature, and stimulates the moral energies of the pupil. Each teacher is required to teach every pupil at least one new passage each week.

It has always been noticeable in some schools, that during the spring and fall terms the attendance is much smaller than in the winter term.

This unnecessary and lamentable condition is caused by the parents keeping their boys out of school during the busy season of farm work. Pupils who attend school in this interrupted manner practically make no advancement in their studies. It is a great injustice to the children and should be corrected. The Public Laws of Maine, 1899, Chapter 80, Sec. 1, provide, that “every child between the ages of seven and fifteen inclusive, shall attend some public day school during the time said school is in session.” It is especially urged that parents give this matter their attention.

After much thought and labor, an outline for a course of study has been made. This was put into effect at the beginning of the school year. It is merely a skeleton guide for the teachers and must be developed and animated by their own resources and daily study. It was realized at the beginning that we should meet with many discouragements in attempting to introduce a course of study in our rural and ungraded schools, but even if the experiment shall prove unsuccessful, it will certainly serve as a stimulus and encouragement to the pupils to gain a definite goal. At the close of each term and year the pupils are given examinations and must obtain sufficient rank in their studies before they are allowed to enter the next grade, at which time a promotion card is given. At the end of the course there will be a graduation and diplomas conferred. For the benefit of all those interested, the outline is made a part of this report, which it is hoped will meet with the intelligent consideration of the citizens of the town.
