In the process, they raise questions about the moral ambiguities that result from their actions. The featured speakers will be:

*Feb. 24: David Waldstreicher, Professor of History, Temple University, "Ancient, Moderns, and Africans: Phillis Wheatley and the Politics of Slavery"

Dear Cultural Affairs Committee:

The History Department Symposium committee has planned an ambitious and exciting program for our Spring 2014 series and are seeking money to assist us in bringing four well-known historians to campus to speak on, "Empire, Politics, and Community: Negotiating Paths of Resistance." In this time of political deadlock, when so many critical issues are at stake, it is important to provide our students and the community at large with examples from the past that show how those who have been marginalized have asserted their right to exist with dignity.

Our program has broad appeal to students and faculty across campus. We will work closely with the Office of Multicultural Student Affairs, the Native American Studies Program, Bethel, Judaic Studies, the University of Maine Humanities Initiative, and the Department of Anthropology to publicize our events.

The speakers will highlight a wide range of situations in which writers, labor activists, and Native communities have retained their independence and maintained their identity in the face of overwhelming odds. While the whole series addresses these issues, we are requesting funding for the following three talks. Each lecture also includes a discussion with history graduate students and undergraduate history majors about conducting research.

"Ancients, Moderns, and Africans: Phillis Wheatley and the Politics of Slavery"

The Boston slave poet Phillis Wheatley (1753-84) often causes modern readers to question why she didn't write about what she knew - Africa, and slavery - rather than taking her cues from contemporary neoclassicism. David Waldstreicher, Professor of History at Temple University and Co-Editor Journal of the Early Republic, argues that Wheatley's poetry was strategic. She knew that the debate about ancient and modern virtues was capacious enough to allow her to participate in the conversation about barbarism, religion, and slavery itself. Waldstreicher will compare what Wheatley experienced and wrote about Africa to her classicism and suggest why that productive relationship between the two provoked Thomas Jefferson to deny its very possibility.

"The Ambiguity of Virtue: Gertrude van Tijn and the Fate of the Dutch Jews"

Gertrude van Tijn was a German-born social worker who served as the secretary of the Amsterdam Jewish Refugees Committee from 1933-1941 and then headed the emigration department of the Nazi-appointed Jewish Council in Amsterdam. As she enabled thousands of Jews to escape, she faced difficult moral choices. Bernard Wasserstein of the University of Chicago, whose book The Ambiguity of Virtue: Gertrude van Tijn and the Fate of the Dutch Jews will be published this year by Harvard University Press, will place her conduct and objectives in their context, and thus reveal the "ambiguity of virtue."

"Working and Belonging in Indian Country"

The term "work" has a complex history in Indian Country. If Americans are familiar with anything about Native communities it is the (genuine and supposed) high rate of unemployment in Indian country. At the same time, federal Indian policies, from mission work to boarding schools and allotment, reorganization all revolve around assumptions about Indian laboring. Professor Brian C. Hosmer, who holds the H.G. Barnard Chair of Western American History at the University of Tulsa, will examine the intersections between economic change and political action as experienced in twentieth century Indigenous communities. His lecture, "Working and Belonging in Indian Country," draws upon more than a decade of research at the Wind River Indian Reservation in Wyoming. He will discuss the term "belonging," as in who controls Native labor and production, and the effect of working upon social cohesion and cultural identity.

We have invited Professor Hosmer to visit with the Penobscots and Passamaquoddies and for this reason have extended his stay and increased his honorarium.

We hope you will consider our request.

Sincerely,

Mazie Hough, Assistant Professor, History and Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies

Micah Pawling, Assistant Professor, History and Native American Studies

Subject: Cultural Affairs Award

To:  Richard Judd

Dear Richard,

Thanks very much for submitting an application to the December 2013 Cultural Affairs/Distinguished Lecture Series funding competition. This round was particularly difficult for the committee, as we had many excellent proposals asking for a total of almost $35,000 in CADLS support. We had only $15,000 to award, so were unable to fund some proposals at all, while the rest received less than requested. We wish we had more funds for all of the great events brought forward to the Committee.

In its meeting on December 17, the CADLS Committee awarded $2,000.00 for your project. Because this is less than requested, I would be very grateful if you could indicate whether your event or program can still be held.

Thank you.

- 1979 Britain and the Jews of Europe, 1939-1945, examining the British record in relation to the Jewish genocide in Europe, focussing on British receptivity to Jewish immigration to the UK, to the Empire, and to Palestine, on British policy regarding relief supplies sent through the economic blockade to Nazi Europe, and on official reaction to proposals for the bombing of Auschwitz and for aid to Jewish resistance in occupied Europe.

- 1985 (edited with Frances Malino) The Jews in Modern France
- 1992 Herbert Samuel: A Political Life, a political biography of the First High Commissioner under the British Mandate in Palestine and the successor to Lloyd George as leader of the British Liberal Party.
- 1996 Vanishing Diaspora: The Jews in Europe since 1945 proposed a radical reassessment of post-Hitler European Jewry; the picture of demographic decline, social disintegration, and cultural dissolution provoked considerable debate.
- 2001 Divided Jerusalem: Struggle for the Holy City returned to Wasserstein's earlier interest in the Arab-Israeli conflict. The book surveys the diplomatic history of the Jerusalem question over the past two hundred years, with a close focus on the period since 1967. The book emphasizes the historic roots of the current divisions in the city and the exploitation of religious devotion to the city by politicians of all three monotheistic faiths.
- 2003 Israelis and Palestinians: Why Do They Fight? Can They Stop? (Yale University Press) looks at the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict in five chapters: People, Society, Environment, Territory, and Dynamics of Political Change. It focuses in particular on demography, social relations (especially the labour market), and environmental pressures, showing how these have shaped and continue to shape the nature of Israeli-Palestinian relations.
- 2007 Barbarism and Civilization: A History of Europe in Our Time (Oxford University Press) is a general history of the continent since 1914.

2014 The Ambiguity of Virtue: Gertrude van Tijn and the Fate of the Dutch Jews (Harvard University Press).

"The Ambiguity of Virtue: Gertrude van Tijn and the Fate of the Dutch Jews in World War II"

BERNARD WASSERSTEIN

Harriet & Ulrich Meyer Professor Emeritus of Modern European Jewish History University of Chicago

Professor Wasserstein is the author of 11 books on modern Jewish history, including a volume on Gertrude van Tijn, published earlier this year by Harvard University Press. The book tells the moving story of Gertrude van Tijn, a Jewish German social worker who worked tirelessly on behalf of her fellow Jews as the avenues that might save them were closed off. Between 1933 and 1940, van Tijn helped organize Jewish emigration from Nazi Germany. After the Germans occupied Holland in 1940, she worked for the Nazi appointed Jewish Council in Amsterdam, helping many Jews to escape to safety. In 1943, van Tijn was arrested by the Nazis and sent to the German concentration camp at Bergen Belsen, which she survived. Some later called her heroine for the choices she made, while others denounced her as a collaborator.

Alisha Lukas <alisha.lukas1@maine.edu> writes:
final report summary for your event "Empire, Politics, and Community".

June 30, 2014

Good afternoon Alisha:

I apologize for responding so late to your request for a final report summary for our event, "Empire, Politics, and Community"; it was not clear whether the Symposium Committee would be completing the report or I would, and since the committee member have gone off for the summer, I guess it falls to me.

We used the $2,000 granted to the History Department to defray costs for bringing four world-class historians to campus to speak to faculty members, graduate students, undergraduate students, and the community. These four were Professor David Waldstreicher, who spoke on "Ancients, Moderns, and Africans: Phillis Wheatley and the Politics of Slavery"; Professor Bernard Wasserstein, who spoke on "The Ambiguity of Virtue: Gertrude van Tijn and the Fate of the Dutch Jews in World War II"; Professor Brian C. Hosmer, who spoke on "Working & Belonging in Indian Country; and Michele Wehrwein Albion, who spoke at our Phi Alpha Theta Awards Ceremony on the topic "History, the Ultimate Gateway Drug: The Challenges, Pleasures, and Value of Public History."

Each of these lectures was, I'm happy to report, well attended, and judging from the intense Q&A following each, the audience gained a great deal of insight.

Suzanne Moulton has already forwarded to you the expense accounting for the $2,000. In general, the honorarium and travel expenses for Professor Waldstreicher amounted to $1,013.85; for Professor Wasserstein, $1,595.45; for Professor Hosmer, $3,326.33; and for Ms. Albion, $646.41. Thank you very much for your contribution to our Symposium Series.
